chashama North is an artists' residency that provides a peaceful and remote setting to tend to one's artist vision.

chashama North is unique in supporting a sense of community and dialogue about art and life through shared communal meals of locally grown organic and whole foods.

In its sixth year, chashama North continues to evolve as an opportunity for emerging artists. The program provides 3 summer sessions of live and work space for seven rotating artists-in-residence. The communal kitchen is stocked with fresh, local organic produce. Cooperatively prepared daily meals with a focus on whole foods act as an addition to the residency program.

Facilities:

Set on five acres, adjacent to hundreds of acres of undeveloped woods, chashama North consists of two structures, the Spruce Farmhouse and the Bungalows.

The Farmhouse is a historic farmhouse with two bedrooms and five studios.

The Bungalows are three adjacent apartments that house the communal kitchen and lounge, five bedrooms and two studio spaces.

Each artist is given a private bedroom with private or shared bathrooms.

Each semi-private studio has one or two tables, clip lamps and chairs.

Easels and mixing palettes, extra tables or saw horses are available.

The communal kitchen is stocked with whole grains, fresh produce and naturally raised foods. While there is one shared meal per day, the kitchen is stocked so individual meals and snacks can be prepared as needed.

Outdoor dining area.

Communal lounge.

2-4 kitchen spaces for artist experiments or food related installations.

Communal computer for emailing. Wireless network in Spruce farmhouse.

Fire pit.

Star gazing platform.

Residency Information:

Residencies are four weeks and culminate in an open studios event, open to friends and the local community.

Artists are free to set their own daily schedule and activities.

Artists must coordinate their own transportation to and from the residency.

A communal bicycle is available.

There is one shared meal daily. Communal meals are prepared and cleaned through a rotational work schedule.
